Typewriting Expert a
Witness in Dean
Case.

ADDED LINES TO RECEIPT.

Mrs. Goebel's Receipt to Kellogg Tampered With, He Says.

Prosecuting Attorney Olcott introduced a new kind of expert in the Kellogg trial this afternoon—an expert on typewriting. He was William F. Miller, a typewriter dealer. "Are you an expert in typewriting machines and their writing?" asked Mr. Olcott.

"Yes, I've been in the business twenty-five years," said Mr. Miller.

"Look at this paper," said Mr. Olcott, handing Miller a typewritten paper signed "Emile Goebel." "And tell me about it."

The paper was the alleged release of Kellogg by Mrs. Goebel for $500 "blood money."

"The last three lines of this were written at one time," answered Miller. "The first paragraph was added afterward and by another kind of machine. The 'o's are different and the spacing is not the same."

This bears out Mrs. Goebel's dramatic statement on Tuesday that she never signed anything but a simple receipt for $500 from Kellogg.

Mrs. Goebel at the time said it was Kellogg's habit to get signatures and then write in matter above them.

The defense did not cross-examine Miller.

David N. Carvalho, the handwriting expert, was Mr. Olcott's principal witness.

"Several of the 'Jacob Keller' checks and letters were handed to him," said Carvalho. "Are these all written by the same hand?" Mr. Olcott asked.

"Yes," said Carvalho.

Carvalho then declared that the paper and ink were of the same kind in each instance.

Mr. Carvalho said Kellogg wrote a rough draft of an alibi circular sent out by the E. S. Dean Company.

Willie Lang, formerly Kellogg's office boy, told today how Kellogg made out statements from financial papers to give customers an idea that the Dean Company really had transactions on the exchange.

Lang said these statements were made out by Kellogg and Keller from Wall Street quotations. The transactions were represented as being made through the brokerage firm of Goslin & Co.

The boy said Kellogg had a big supply of Goslin & Co. stock. One special transaction he remembered was the selling of a $100,000 business for one day.

It was also brought out by Mr. Olcott that Kellogg got mail in other places than at the Dean office.

"Where were those places?" asked Carvalho.

"One was in the Consolidated Exchange Building, under the name of 'Vanderburg & Co.' Another was at 46 New Street, in the name of Henderson & Co. Both offices were empty rooms, simply gathered up the mail once a day from the floor, where the carrier dropped it through the letter boxes."

Where else were any of these "fake" offices?

Lang got a lot of mail from an "empty" office at 21 New Street addressed to Hillton & Co. Another place was in a store kept by Martin Ahrendt, at 61 Liberty Street, who rented out private letter boxes.

Francis H. Harrison, clerk of the American Exchange, under the name of "Vanderburg & Co." followed Lang with the examination of Kellogg's accounts under the name of "Vanderburg & Co." James H. Valentine, Laurence, Fraser & Co., Frank C. Watts and Charles E. Demarest, of the American Exchange, followed with testimony of the same kind.

Edward H. Patterson, of Matheawan, a telephone operator, testified that he had deposited $25 with the Dean Company, leaving his "dividends" until the sum reached $100. That was transferred to "great combination No. 2" and he never got anything back.

TRAGIC TALE OF SUICIDE.

A Supposed Absconder's Body Found in His House.

(Special to The Evening World.)
ATLANTA, Ga., March 22.—Kelly Brinsford, cashier for James T. Prince, the agent of an insurance company of New York, disappeared on Dec. 29 last, deserting his young and beautiful bride of three months.

An investigation developed the fact that there was a shortage in his accounts of over $500. His bride went into mourning, while she has worn ever since, and returned to her parents.

The house the Brinsfords have occupied was rented to another family two months ago. A disagreeable odor was noticed about the house, but could not be traced. To-day the basement was searched and Brinsford's body was found.

It was so badly decomposed that recognition was impossible. Identification was made by two silver suspenders buckles, one bearing his name and the other that of his bride, "Daisy."

At the time of his disappearance his father, a Methodist minister, declared that his son had been driven crazy by the use of cigarettes, and the young man's physician made a statement to that effect.

A half-smoked cigarette was found in his hand and a package of them beside him. In his pocket was a pistol fully loaded. It is believed he took poison.

BISNAU NOW IN THE TOILS.

Reputed Husband of Baltimore Heiress Under Arrest.

Dr. William A. Bisnau, the Baltimore dentist, with Harriet B. Clogg, the Baltimore belle, who was arrested when she arrived in this port on the Trave Tuesday last, was arrested at 3 o'clock this afternoon while loitering about the Tomb and was taken to Detective Monahan to Police Headquarters, then before Magistrate Mott in the Jefferson Market Police Court.

He is charged by Thomas Kelly, representing the Mutual Furniture Company, of 255 Sixth avenue, with having bought $50 worth of furniture last December, paying $15 on it and then selling it while there was a chattel mortgage on it.

Bisnau was held by Magistrate Mott in $500 bail for examination to-morrow. Miss Clogg, or Mrs. Bisnau, as she calls herself, was arrested on several indictments for larceny in Baltimore and is held awaiting extradition.

NETHERSOLE CALLED.

Miss Olga Netherpole and Theodore Moss appeared before the Grand Jury this morning and testified that to their minds there was nothing immoral or deleterious to the mind of innocence and youth in the play of "Rapha" as it was presented by Miss Netherpole in Mr. Moss's theatre until the authorities stepped in and made some arrests and the performances of the play were stopped.

Many other witnesses who had testified before the police court examination were subpoenaed, but only two beside Miss Netherpole and the veteran manager were examined. These were W. O. Inglis and Mrs. Henley, of the Society for the Study of Life.

THOMPSON IS ACTIVE.

Exactly why Inspector Thompson found business this morning in the office of Howe & Hummel is one of those mysteries of the Police Department which nobody can find out.

But there he was at 9 o'clock sharp, and so full of business that he kept the office force bustling.

When Miss Netherpole appeared Thompson ran forward toward the actress, thrusting out both hands with which he clasped her own, and greeted her with effusiveness so great that the reporters present hid their blushes behind their new spring hats, expecting at any time he would be greeted with a "Rapha" kiss. But he was not.

After they had exchanged greetings of the most friendly kind, they backed into a corner and held a whispered conversation of the most earnest kind.

HICCUGHS KILL LAWYER.

Physicians Say the Spasms Were Many Remedies Tried.

PHILADELPHIA, March 22.—Hiccoughs caused the death of lawyer Louis De Pul Vall, a leader of the Prohibition party in Pennsylvania.

Mr. Vall's spasms, his physicians say, were the result of heart disease. The trouble was first manifested last Thursday and continued without interruption day and night to his death.

When it became known that he was suffering from hiccoughs many persons wrote to the family suggesting remedies, but none was of any avail.

OTTO HUBER DIED OF WORRY.

Business Cares Brought on Illness That Proved Fatal.

Otto Huber, the millionaire brewer, died this morning at Hotel Margaret, Columbia Heights, Brooklyn. His wife and family were at his bedside.

He had been ill five weeks of heart trouble and a complication of diseases. Since Friday he had been very low, and Monday morning he was thought to be dying. He rallied and hope was expressed by his physicians that he would pull through. Last night he began to sink, though, and he died an hour after midnight.

His illness is said to have been caused by his efforts to make the Mail Trust a success.

Mr. Huber was born in Brooklyn thirty-four years ago. His father, Otto Huber, died in 1880, leaving his great brewing establishment at Meserope street and Duaneville avenue to his four sons. Otto, Jr., was appointed manager.

Mr. Huber was a member of several of the most prominent clubs.

He owned a large amount of property and was proprietor of the Hotel Metropolitan, Avoca Villa at Bath Beach, and the Brooklyn Music Hall.

APPLETON & CO. FAIL.

garding the steps leading to the application for a receiver.

Daniel Pritchard, who made the application for a receiver, is owner of 10 shares of stock and manager of the company's business. According to the petition to the court the corporation was wrecked on the installment plan.

It is set forth that D. Appleton & Co. do and have done a very large business in selling books on long time and small payments. The time in which such sales are made varies from six months to thirty-six months, or an average of from sixteen to eighteen months.

Must close before the company receives returns from sales which will compensate the firm for the original cost of publication.

The capital stock of the company is consequently tied up in assets not readily convertible and the corporation has been obliged to borrow large sums of money on notes, some of which are now due, and others maturing for large amounts within a short time.

During the residue of this month there is maturing $250,000 in notes, $250,000 in notes maturing in April and $250,000 in May.

DEBTS OF THE FIRM.

The firm is also indebted in large sums for royalties to authors and for merchandise and there is great danger, the petition sets forth, that the company's property in various States and in foreign countries might be attached and sold with the result that the assets would be absorbed by a few creditors to the detriment of the creditors whose claims have not as yet reached maturity.

There is also danger that a number of suits might be brought against the company within a few days on claims which have or are about to mature. The claims of authors for royalties on books published amount to $50,000.

Most of these obligations the company has $100,000 cash on hand and in bank; accounts receivable, $15,000; stock $100,000.

BRAIN FOOD

Is of Little Benefit Unless It Is Digested.

Nearly every one will admit that as a nation we eat too much meat and too little of vegetables and the grains.

For business men, office men and clerks, and in fact every one engaged in sedentary or indoor occupations, grains, milk and vegetables are much more healthful.

Only men engaged in a severe outdoor manual labor can live on a heavy meat diet and continue in health.

As a general rule, meat once a day is sufficient for all classes of men, women and children, and grains, fruit and vegetables should constitute the bulk of food eaten.

But many of the most nutritious foods are difficult of digestion, and it is of no use to advise brain workers to eat largely of grains and vegetables where the digestion is too weak to assimilate them properly.

It is always best to get the best results from our food that some simple and harmless digestive should be taken after meals to assist the relaxed digestive organs, and several years' experience has proven Stuart's Dreyse Tablets to be a very safe, pleasant and effective digestive and a remedy which may be taken daily with the best results.

Stuart's Dreyse Tablets can hardly be called a patent medicine, as they do not act on the bowels nor any particular organ but only on the food eaten. They supply what weak stomachs lack, namely, digestive, and by stimulating the gastric glands increase the natural secretion of hydrochloric acid.

People who make a daily practice of taking one or two of Stuart's Dreyse Tablets after each meal are sure to have perfect digestion, which means perfect health.

There is no danger of forming an injurious habit, as the tablets contain absolutely nothing but natural digestives: cocaine, morphine and similar drugs have no place in a stomach medicine. Stuart's Dreyse Tablets are certainly the best known and most popular of all stomach remedies.

Ask your druggist for a fifty-cent package of Stuart's Dreyse Tablets and after a week's use note the improvement in health, appetite and nervous energy.
